

Reframing the Density Debate

Density, diversity and the new Australian dream.

Be the first to access the results from ground-breaking new research into the all-important question of community attitudes to density. With Western Australia's population set to more than double in the next 50 years, the case for change needs to be made, and it needs to be made now. New thought leadership to build community understanding and acceptance of density, and its benefits, is urgently required.

The Property Council's WA Division is now addressing a major barrier to amenity and affordability by taking forward the density debate. The research to be unveiled at this event not only unpicks the problem but provides a solution. Commissioned exclusively for the Property Council, it identifies the optimal strategies and actions to garner community support for urban density.

This game-changing paper debunks the myths that have made 'density' a dirty word, turning the focus to diversity and empowering the public with housing choices that enable shorter commutes and more vibrant communities.

Come along to see what the new Australian dream will be, and why it takes a village to deliver.
